

2. Scripps Howard's Comments on Motion for Summary Decision do make the argument that "Four Jacks did not have valid [FAA] approval at the time it filed its application." Scripps Howard's Motion to Enlarge does not specifically raise this argument. In any case, the argument is fallacious since Four Jacks obtained FAA approval for a height of 1249 ft. (381 meters) AMSL on April 2, 1968 and the FAA approval was reaffirmed on February 14, 1992. In any event, however, it should be noted that the FCC Form 301 application has never required applicants to have FAA approval at the time of filing and applicants routinely provide FAA approval at a later date.
